“Aren’t they adorable?” I said softly, somehow feeling that speaking any louder would be embarrassing.

“You think they might be dating?” Amy asked. I open my mouth, a ‘yes’ already on my tongue. Their love are too pure for dating. Their love is something that exist without a doubt.

“Are you nervous?” Mike ask, smiling slightly at the girl beside him. El shake her head.

“I’m...excited.” the girl said softly, small smile gracing her face. Once again, she looks at Mike.

He grab her hand and stared at her eyes. “Remember to make friends, okay?”

“No, no,” Mike denied, even the slight thought of leaving her is crushing to him.

The fear seems to subside from her eyes, but her grip on his hand certainly isn’t going to let go.

El nodded, the boys had given her a list of things that she need and Joyce had given her a list of things to do.

“Alright, come on, we have to catch up to them.” he grinned, tugging her hand.

It’s not much, El thought, closing her eyes as breeze of wind greet her face. The boys are still there.
